From the Director:

This morning, Finger Lakes hosted a correctional facilities service meeting at our building. In attendance were either correctional facilities librarians or deputies for the four correctional facilities we provide service to – Auburn, Cayuga, Five Points, and the Willard Drug Treatment Campus. I’d thought I would take the opportunity to explain what services FLLS provides to these facilities.

Out of the 23 public libraries systems in NY State, 17 library systems have state correctional facilities in their system service area, including FLLS. NY State law requires a direct cooperation between public library systems and correctional facilities to provide library services. FLLS provides standard library services to these facilities, such as interlibrary loan, delivery, and reference services. We also provide assistance with special formats, such as providing access to Braille, large print, recorded and digital format of materials for people with print-related and other disabilities. FLLS publishes a re-entry guide for our service areas to help inmates prepare for release. The guide is supplied to the correctional facilities librarians to reproduce as needed. A large part of our service to the correctional facilities is to help with collection development and programming. FLLS helps purchase library materials to help supplement the collections of the correctional facilities libraries, and can also help provide speakers and performers to the facility. We also provide continuing education opportunities to the librarians.

Our yearly meeting the correctional facilities is a time to not only go over our correctional facilities budget with them, but also to hear how our services are working for their facilities. We use this as an opportunity to make sure their delivery is adequate, that we are able to supply their interlibrary loan needs, and to offer assistance with collection development. We are planning site visits to each of the four facilities by the end of the summer to tour their libraries. It was also a great chance to hear updates of various programs the facilities are providing, including some great gardening programs and book groups.

House Vote Denies IRS Access to Nonprofit Donor Lists

“Last week, the House passed a bill that would block the IRS from accessing nonprofit donor lists. Currently, nonprofit organizations are required to submit a list of every donor who has gifted $5,000 or more on Schedule B of their annual Form 990. The IRS indicates that the idea behind donor disclosure was to determine "whether or not the people who make large contributions have undue influence over the operation of the organization."

“With the passing of the Preventing IRS Abuse and Protecting Free Speech Act, 501(c) organizations will no longer be required to send this information to the IRS; however, donations of $5,000 or greater made by employees, directors or officers of nonprofit organizations will still need to be disclosed. Meanwhile, the IRS is apparently gearing up to propose new regulations, possibly in December.”

A Goldmine of Open Data about Nonprofits—Now at Your Fingertips

“A federal court order … required the IRS to disclose electronically filed Form 990’s non-profit tax returns as open data. Now 1.4 million e-filed returns dating back to 2011 are now available for free on Amazon Web Services.”

Why Motivating People Doesn't Work . . . and What Does: The New Science of Leading, Energizing, and Engaging by Susan Fowler

Top leadership researcher, consultant, and coach Susan Fowler says stop trying to motivate people! It's frustrating for everyone involved and it just doesn't work. You can't motivate people—they are already motivated but generally in superficial and short-term ways. In this book, Fowler builds upon the latest scientific research on the nature of human motivation to lay out a tested model and course of action that will help leaders guide their people toward the kind of motivation that not only increases productivity and engagement but that gives them a profound sense of purpose and fulfillment.
Letter to the Community from Annette Birdsall regarding their Community Read.

Dear Community,

Since there is a great deal of misinformation and gossip about the community read; I want to provide the facts.

I proudly stand by Alex Gino’s book George, as a community read choice for all of us. This story is about a girl who feels she doesn’t belong. The response in the local press illustrates why she would feel isolated and alone. Any title could be challenged, and our responsibility as a library is to provide information to our entire community. Our selection process has a long history and meets our library standards. If our choice makes one child feel more welcome, helps them understand that gender identity is part of human growth, or that we all belong without needing to conform, then we are doing our job.

We distributed the school’s community read selections for Seedfolks (teen pregnancy, hunger, poverty) and I am Malala (child shot in the head); selected by the school for similar reasons without comment. How saddened I am that a story about a transgender child raised intolerance. Parents have the right to choose whether their own children read the selected title or not. And parents were informed.

The library sent 2300 newsletters into the community, advertised on Facebook, our website, and sent numerous press releases out to our regular distribution lists including the community newspapers. On May 24, I sent the flyers, bookmarks, stickers, and bookplates to the school and the Ovid Library so they could also publicize the read, as promised. We didn’t warn or notify, but we certainly did offer publicity for the opportunity to read and learn.

This project was funded by the Myrtle Dee Nash Memorial fund of the Community Foundation of Tompkins County. I invited participation to the Edith B. Ford Memorial Library in Ovid, and to the School Library in Trumansburg and received overwhelming support from both. I did not have an agenda beyond choosing good story that would invite thoughtful conversation, or only use the Ovid library or school for distribution, but rather offered the opportunity for mutual benefit. While the public library would have proceeded without the school or Ovid library we welcomed both.

We also recognize that children participate by being part of a community of peers that struggle with their own issues while growing up. A goal of our grant is to provide a thoughtful, understanding conversation where fear does not make people hide or censor.

I look forward to the opportunity to speak with you directly, rather than through the press. Please read Melissa’s story and come to our book discussions in August.

Thank you,
Annette Birdsall, Ulysses Philomathic Library Director

YA Book of the Week:

It Looks Like This by Rafi Mittlefeldt

A new state, a new city, a new high school. Mike’s father has already found a new evangelical church for the family to attend, even if Mike and his plainspoken little sister, Toby, don’t want to go. Dad wants Mike to ditch art for sports, to toughen up, but there’s something uneasy behind his demands. Then Mike meets Sean, the new kid, and “hey” becomes games of basketball, partnering on a French project, hanging out after school. A night at the beach. The fierce colors of sunrise. But Mike’s father is always watching. And so is Victor from school, cell phone in hand. In guarded, Carveresque prose that propels you forward with a sense of stomach-dropping inevitability, Rafi Mittlefeldt tells a wrenching tale of first love and loss that exposes the undercurrents of a tidy suburban world. Heartbreaking and ultimately life-affirming, It Looks Like This is a novel of love and family and forgiveness—not just of others, but of yourself.
Polaris Tip of the Week

Logging On & Off
It is critical to log on and off correctly. When closing Polaris, simply clicking on the X on the toolbar or the Remote Desktop without logging off may cause issues the next time you try to login.

To Log On: Double click on the Remote Desktop/Polaris icon on your computer’s desktop. The Remote Desktop will open on your screen and you can double click the Polaris icon along the left hand side of the screen. The User Name will already be supplied. Then, enter your Password. Note: User Name and Password ARE Case Sensitive.

Having trouble with your receipt printers? You may have logged onto the Polaris toolbar before the printers were able to map completely. It is recommended that you wait a few seconds before opening the Polaris toolbar to ensure that everything loads correctly.

To Log Off: On the toolbar, go to the File à Log Off or use (Ctrl) + (L) and select OK. After properly logging off, click once on the X in the upper right hand corner of the Polaris toolbar to close it. Then, go to the Windows button in the bottom left hand corner of the screen, right click, move your mouse to Shut down or sign out, and left click on Sign out.

Question of the Week

LAST WEEK’S QUESTION OF THE WEEK:
The Rainbow Flag has become a symbol for LGBTQ Pride. What year was it first used to represent pride? What do each of the colors mean?

In 1978 Baker was asked by famous gay activist Harvey Milk to create a sort of logo for the LGBT rights movement. He created an eight-colour flag, but due to printer costs changed it to six -- each with a special meaning.
Red stands for life, orange for healing, yellow for the sun, green for nature, blue for peace and purple for inner spirit, according to Baker.
The two extra colours upon creation were pink for sexuality and turquoise for magic and art.
So, why the rainbow? "It's natural, it fits our diversity," Baker said. "We are all the colours, all the ages, all the races.

THIS WEEK’S QUESTION OF THE WEEK:
“Love Conquers Hate” is the motto of what civil rights organization?

To answer a Question of the Week, please email Amanda (aschiavulli@flls.org) with “Question of the Week” in the Subject. Please include your source.
