Reminders:

There’s Still Time to Fight for Net Neutrality!
The existing rules are crucial for public institutions like libraries. Now is the time to make your voice heard. The FCC will be accepting comments on its proposed rollback of these rules until July 17.

To leave a public comment on the FCC site:
2. Click on Express Comment in the middle of the page.
3. In the Proceedings box, add 17-108 to associate your comment with the right proposal.
4. Enter your name and address, and your comment. Note: This information will be publicly posted on the FCC’s website once it’s submitted and cannot be edited.

Tell the FCC why net neutrality matters to you as a librarian or information professional. The best stories are local, compelling, personal, relatively recent, and have details.

- What digital content do you offer your community that might be relegated to “slow lanes” or might bring higher costs to the library if your vendors are forced to pay for prioritized delivery? (This may include ebooks, streaming media, interactive homework assistance, online language learning, and digital special collections.)
- Do you offer no-fee Wi-Fi to patrons?
- Do patrons use the internet at your library to access online government programs and services? Would deprioritized access hurt them?
- Do patrons use the internet at your library to upload and share their own digital media, develop and support small businesses, use video conferencing, or collaborate online for school or research projects? What would slower service do to these activities?
From the Director

I have recently been asked a few questions about requirements for trustees, so I thought it would be a good time to review some trustee information. The Handbook for Library Trustees of New York State, 2015 edition defines a trustee as a “person whom property is legally committed in trust. A library trustee’s commitment is to both the physical property and resources of the library and the services it provides. The library board has the final responsibility to see that its library provides the best possible service to its community.”

Trustees also fall under Public Officers Law, which can be found at: http://www.nysl.nysed.gov/libdev/excerpts/pbo3.htm. There are certain qualifications for holding office, including age, residency, and citizenship. For example, a library might want a teen representative on their board to help with outreach to that age group. Public Officer’s Law requires that you must be 18 to hold a civil office. In this instance, a library could have a teen advisory group that advises the Board and may even attend board meetings once or twice a year for a presentation or updates, but they cannot be voting board members of the library’s board of trustees unless they are 18 or older.

Citizenship and residency of the state is also a requirement. I recently worked with one of our member libraries who was seeking a new trustee to fill in for a trustee who had stepped down. The person interested in taking the spot was a Canadian citizen and the State required we follow Public Officers Law on citizenship, which requires that a person holding a civil office be a citizen of the United States. With many foreign residents in our services area, this may be an issue that comes up in your library.

All trustees and libraries should be aware that the New York State Library provides information on a wide range of topics like this on their website (http://www.nysl.nysed.gov). If your library needs more copies of The Handbook for Library Trustees of New York State, 2015 edition, please email or call me, as we still have paper copies available. You can also access it online at: http://www.nysl.nysed.gov/libdev/trustees/handbook/. Please don’t hesitate to call me or email me with any trustee question or concern.

Professional Collection Highlight

The Makerspace Librarian's Sourcebook by Ellyssa Kroski

Library makerspaces continue to thrive, drawing new patrons in and engaging them as never before. This hands-on sourcebook edited by technology expert Kroski includes everything libraries need to know about the major topics, tools, and technologies relevant to makerspaces today. Packed with cutting edge instruction and advice from the field's most tech-savvy innovators, this collection leads librarians through how to start their own makerspace from the ground up, covering strategic planning, funding sources, starter equipment lists, space design, and safety guidelines.

As useful for those just entering the "what if" stage as it is for those with makerspaces already up and running, this book will help libraries engage the community in their makerspaces.

Storytime Rhyme of the Week

My Big Blue Boat

I love to row in my big blue boat,
My big blue boat, my big blue boat
I love to row in my big blue boat
Out on the deep blue sea
My big blue boat has two red sails
(wave arms over head like sails)
Two red sails, two red sails
My big blue boat has two red sails
Out on the deep blue sea
So come for a row in my big blue boat
My big blue boat, my big blue boat
So come for a row in a big blue boat
Out on the deep blue sea

YA Book of the Week:

Writing Radar: Using Your Journal to Snoop Out and Craft Great Stories by Jack Gantos

With the signature wit and humor that have garnered him legions of fans, Jack Gantos instructs young writers on using their "writing radar" to unearth story ideas from their everyday lives. Incorporating his own misadventures as a developing writer, Gantos inspires readers to build confidence and establish good writing habits as they create, revise, and perfect their stories. Pop-out text boxes highlight key tips, alongside Gantos's own illustrations, sample stories, and snippets from his childhood journals. More than just a how-to guide, Writing Radar is a celebration of the power of storytelling and an ode to the characters who—many unwittingly—inspired Gantos's own writing career.

Scam of the Week

Scam of the Week: Phishing Moves to Smishing / and More News

Internet bad guys are increasingly trying to circumvent your spam filters and instead are targeting your users directly through their smartphone with smishing attacks, which are hard to stop.

The practice has been around for a few years, but current new scams are mystery shopping invitations that start with a text, social engineering the victim to send an email to the scammers, and then get roped into a shopping fraud.

These types of smishing attacks are also more and more used for identity theft, bank account take-overs, or pressure employees into giving out personal or company confidential information. Fortune magazine has a new article about this, and they lead with a video made by USA Today which is great to send to your users as a reminder. An Australian researcher also just published data to suggest cybercriminals are getting better results using the phone these days.

I suggest you send employees, friends and family an email about this Scam of the Week, your welcome to copy/paste/edit:

"Bad guys are increasingly targeting you through your smartphone. They send texts that trick you into doing something against your own best interests. At the moment, there is a mystery shopping scam going on, starting out with a text invitation, asking you to send an email for more info which then gets you roped into the scam.

Always, when you get a text, remember to "Think Before You Tap", because more and more, texts are being used for identity theft, bank account take-overs and to pressure you into giving out personal or company confidential information. Here is a short video made by USA Today that shows how this works: https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=ffck9C4vqEM

Obviously, an end-user who was trained to spot social engineering red flags (PDF) would think twice before falling for these scams. The link goes to a complimentary job aid that you can print out and pin to your wall. Your welcome to distribute this PDF to as many people as you can. https://cdn2.hubspot.net/hubfs/241394/Knowbe4-May2015-PDF/SocialEngineeringRedFlags.pdf?

Let's stay safe out there.
