Friends of TCPL Library Grants: DEADLINE EXTENDED!
The deadline to submit your grant application has been extended to September 29. Public libraries within 30 miles of Ithaca in the Finger Lakes Library System are eligible. Proposals should be emailed to sljithaca@aol.com. To download a copy of the application and to learn more, visit www.friendsoftcpl.org/grants/library-grants/lynda.com is available to all member library staff in the FLLS area for free. View all the courses and to reserve your 'seat' – contact Jessica Brooks at (jphilippe@scrlc.org). Please include your phone number and library's name. You can take as many courses as you like during your two-week access.

From The Director

I just returned from St. George, Utah where I attended the 2017 ARSL Conference along with Lisa Semenza of the Hazard Library in Poplar Ridge. Lisa won our full scholarship to attend this year and wrote about her conference experience for us, so please be sure to check out her write-up. This year there were about a dozen public library system directors and staff in addition to library directors from throughout NY at the conference. In total, this year’s conference had 541 attendees, which is a record number for the conference.

I attended some great sessions during the conference, with the best session being “A Model Public Library Board Meeting.” This session was a role playing session of a board meeting and all the issues that could come up during a meeting, from meeting a quorum to rude and disruptive public comments, to material challenges, to board members wanting to go into executive session for every matter. I would love to model something like this for trustee training for our members and found it extremely helpful.

I also attended a session on reimaging libraries and how to measure and manage community expectations, especially when going for ballot funding increases. We learned that by using simple wording changes in flyers, etc. your impact statement could be stronger. An example used was to not use the phrase “we need more money so we can be open longer hours.” Instead, using something like “With increased hours, we can provide more services for patrons seeking more library time” was seen as having a greater community impact.

STEAM programming ideas from NASA was another session I found helpful, especially with the interest in science programming around the eclipse. We made model telescopes out of supplies that most libraries would already have on hand and then explored a model planet that was also easily put together with basic supplies. Another great, fun session was “Book, Line and Sinker” that discussed how the use of incentives, displays and social media can encourage and engage adult readers. The speaker, Jeremy Bolom, from Lincoln Parish Library in Louisiana, created some of the most creative book displays I’ve ever seen, including elaborate Halloween haunted house displays, and a Mardi Gras float in the middle of their library. My favorite idea of his was to have a readers club that honors readers who commit to reading either 50, 75, or 100 books a year. If they succeed, they are treated to a special library card and a night out at the library that involves a red carpet, pretend paparazzi photographs, and a dinner. They now have over 180 participants a year due to successful marketing.

If you aren’t familiar with the Association for Rural and Small Libraries, I recommend checking out their website at http://arsl.info/. They have a helpful listserv and are a growing organization that puts on a great conference. In 2018 the conference will be in Springfield, Illinois and in 2019 it will be in Burlington, Vermont.

Sarah
Reflections on ARSL

By Lisa Semenza: FLLS Scholarship Winner

Last week I had the opportunity to attend the Association for Rural and Small Libraries (ARSL) conference in St. George, Utah. There I was able to make connections with library professionals from across the country and found my counterpart in a Library Director from Shreveport, LA who also has a 500 sq. ft. library.

The keynote speakers were very inspirational with Jill Nystull encouraging everyone to find and follow your passion with her suggestions for how to do so found here: https://www.facebook.com/ARSLpage/photos/pcb.1176588432443279/1176588355776620/?type=3&theater She summed it up by saying, “You will have found your calling when your life story influences your work and not the other way around”. This is exactly what I have found since I began my work in the library. Speaker Clint Lewis encouraged everyone to “Try your best to win; not just to not lose”.

I attended sessions and gained new ideas in the areas of policy manual makeovers, technology classes for seniors, how to maximize your space when you are “bursting at the seams”, how to encourage adults to read unfamiliar books through eye catching displays (if I could actually figure out where to put one), skills for developing dynamic leadership, and a new program idea in the area of “break out boxes”.

I met and spoke with new people at each meal and took advantage of participating in a “dine around” where groups of 15 people go to a restaurant of their choice for dinner in order to make new connections from around the country. Some attendees were “locals” from the state of Utah and one participant came from as far away as Alaska. On Friday I attended “game night” where I met not only librarians, but also 3 women from St. George who were out for the evening. Little did they know they would spend their time drinking a specialty drink called “The Cover Was Blue” and playing “Apples to Apples” with a group a librarians from multiple states.

I also met other people from New York and at dinner on Friday realized that a staff member from the Pioneer Library System and I have followed a parallel life path. We both attended SUNY Geneseo in the same timeframe, where we both majored in educational fields, and ultimately had second careers in the library world. I have now come full circle from my first job in high school as a library page in my hometown library.

I am grateful to the FLLS staff who provided me with the opportunity to attend this conference. A “small” library is classified as serving a population of up to 25,000 people. Based on this definition, all of the libraries in FLLS, except TCPL and AUB, fall into this category, with many of our libraries also being located in a rural area. Therefore, the ARSL Conference is designed for us and I highly recommend that all of you consider applying for the system scholarship to attend next year’s conference in Springfield, IL.
Scam of the Week

Equifax Phishing Attacks

You already know that a whopping 143 million Equifax records were compromised. The difference with this one is that a big-three credit bureau like Equifax tracks so much personal and sometimes confidential information like social security numbers, full names, addresses, birth dates, and even drivers licenses and credit card numbers for some.

These records are first going to be sold on the dark web to organized crime for premium prices, for immediate exploitation, sometimes by local gangs on the street. Shame on Equifax for this epic fail. They will be sued for billions of dollars for this web-app vulnerability. So this Scam of the Week covers what is inevitable in the near future, we have not seen actual Equifax phishing attacks at this point yet, but you can expect them in the coming days and weeks because the bad guys are going to take their most efficient way to leverage this data... email. I suggest you send the following to your employees, friends, and family:

Cyber criminals have stolen 143 million credit records in the recent hacking scandal at big-three credit bureau Equifax. At this point you have to assume that the bad guys have highly personal information that they can use to trick you. You need to watch out for the following things:

- Phishing emails that claim to be from Equifax where you can check if your data was compromised
- Phishing emails that claim there is a problem with a credit card, your credit record, or other personal financial information
- Calls from scammers that claim they are from your bank or credit union
- Fraudulent charges on any credit card because your identity was stolen

Here are 5 things you can do to prevent identity theft:

1. First sign up for credit monitoring (there are many companies providing that service including Equifax but we cannot recommend that)
2. Next freeze your credit files at the three major credit bureaus Equifax, Experian and TransUnion. Remember that generally it is not possible to sign up for credit monitoring services after a freeze is in place. Advice for how to file a freeze is available here on a state-by-state basis: http://consumersunion.org/research/security-freeze/
3. Check your credit reports via the free annualcreditreport.com
4. Check your bank and credit card statements for any unauthorized activity
5. If you believe you may have been the victim of identity theft, here is a site where you can learn more about how to protect yourself: www.idtheftcenter.org. You can also call the center’s toll-free number (888-400-5530) for advice on how to resolve identify-theft issues. All of the center’s services are free.

Let's stay safe out there.

Strategic planning for results by Sandra Nelson

Reflecting on the current planning environment for public libraries, Nelson makes the case for strategic rather than long-term planning and includes a wealth of information about understanding and managing the change process to help staff. It helps readers to: assess the change-readiness of the library and preparing staff to implement forthcoming changes; simplify data collection and decision-making processes through the use of 14 reproducible workforms; identify service priority options and reach agreement as a group; and, successfully present and communicate within their library. Included in the newly revised and adopted Public Library Service Responses are case studies, workforms, and tool kits. "Strategic Planning for Results" offers librarians a wealth of ideas to effectively meet changing community needs.

Trapped behind Nazi Lines: The Story of the U.S. Army Air Force 807th Medical Evacuation Squadron by Eric Braun

From School Library Journal
Gr 5 Up-Fans of survival stories and wartime thrillers will be immediately engaged by this tale. When their plane crashed deep in Nazi-occupied Albania, the members of the 807th were in very serious peril. Their spectacular crash drew attention from friends and foes alike, and unfortunately, as a squadron of nurses and medics, the 807th had virtually no weapons. With the help of Albanian rebels, the Americans were secreted away from the crash, then separated by a bombing strike, and finally led over treacherous mountain paths to rendezvous with British and American spies at the coast of the Adriatic Sea. Covered in lice, sick with dysentery, and walking uphill through blizzards, the 807th overcame insurmountable odds to make their escape to Italy and live to tell this gripping tale. The true story draws on primary sources (the autobiographies of members of the squadron) to create a tense wild-goose chase, with the threat of Nazis lurking behind every treeline. Better yet, this is a real World War II story that has not, before now, yet been adapted for young readers. Readers who love Scholastic’s historical "I Survived" books will find this true story of escape truly amazing. VERDICT A very readable addition to World War II history collections.-Abby Bussen, Muskego Public Library,
Blocks at Check Out

If there is a block on the Patron’s Record, it will display during Check Out. Check with your supervisor for specific library policies.

There will be important information displayed, please do not surpass blocks without reading them!

- If the patron owes money, select Patron Status and collect the fine.
- If the patron has overdue items, select Patron Status and renew the items if possible. Remember that items belonging to other libraries cannot be renewed without permission and items on hold for someone else CANNOT be renewed.
- If the patron has a hold waiting to be picked up, check the item out to the patron.
- If the Patron’s card has expired, select Patron Registration and update the registration date. Remember to delete the block from the patron’s account in the Patron Status General page.
- It may notify you that you are checking out an ILL. Follow the procedures listed on Assigning a Different Loan Period, i.e. creating a special due date.
