Air Pollution

California air pollution and greenhouse gas emissions in urban areas, such as Los Angeles, are...

Human beings rely on air to live and breathe, yet they are also largely responsible for creating the pollution that makes that air unhealthy for themselves and all living things. Air pollution is caused by the release of toxic or damaging particles and gases into the atmosphere. While few scientists disagree that air pollution poses a serious threat to the environment, policy makers and citizens are often at odds as to how to address the problem. There are a variety of causes of air pollution. As humans burn the fossil fuel that powers cars and heat homes—fuels such as natural. View More
